Osteopathy Treats Children. Even the simplest machine requires occasional overhauling, the loosened bolts may be tightened worn parts replaced, and the correct relations of the parts preserved. There is no more delicate machine than the body. Carelessness on the part of the machinist in overlooking some defect may result in the complete ruin of the machine. In the same way negligence on the part of the mother to see that there is no trouble in the mechanism of her child's body may result in years of suffering for him, from which prompt correction and adjustment would have saved him.—Right Way.

BAKER COUNTY FARMERS PASS UP GOOD THING From Baker City Democrat.

For 49 hogs yesterday, weighing not over 200 pounds each, the Baker Packing company paid an Eagle Valley farmer $750.

There is nothing so remarkable about the fact itself, but it does indicate the high prices obtaining, and the scarcity of Baker county porkers. Work it out mathematically and it is almost impossible to find a reason for such scarcity, for the Baker valley should be one of the best hog districts in Oregon.

Yet on the other hand the packing company has purchased every available porker in the county for the next month and still has a great scarcity.

Where a year ago the company had 18,000 pounds of lard, yesterday there was only 600 pounds in the shops. They cannot supply Baker county's needs with Baker's porkers—not nearly.

Yet conditions here are almost ideal for hog raising! By running the shoats on alfalfa until they reach 150 pounds in weight and then turning them into the fattening pens on a ration of wheat, according to the Oregon Agricultural Experiment Station, the farmers can put on the first 150 pounds of weight at 3/4 cents per pound, and can add the next 100 so that the wheat fed will pay them in pork weight at the rate of $1.50 per bushel.

Under such conditions there are scores of ranchers in Baker county most admirably fitted to raise the plebeian hog with great profit—far greater than they are getting from their alfalfa and grain under their present system of marketing their crops as crops yet for some reason there are very few who will pay any attention to that phase of their business.

A constitutional convention would assemble solely for the purpose of doing away with the power of the people to legislate for themselves. The convention would have the power to proclaim a new constitution without a popular vote. Why risk it? We can amend now, as and when wanted.

TAKING RELIGIOUS CENSUS OF TOWN

of Dr. Pratt is very strong and impresses one more and more as acquaintance grows. There is a consciousness that in the quiet, simple, earnest man before you there is a tremendous power, yet masterly control, a strong appreciation of the truth, deep conviction, yearning of heart for the conversion and training of souls, a constant, confident waiting on the Holy Spirit, a mighty grip on and love for the scriptures.

There is no show, no pretension, no concealment, but frank, plain, straightforward presentation of truth and life. His expositions of the word of God have become a prominent feature of the Bible conference program and we know of no one who ever planned to cut Dr. Pratt's hour. He feeds and nourishes the hungry heart and soul. He does not veer one inch from the plain old evangelical gospel. He clings to rock truth as taught by Christ, and Paul in his meary epistles. Men and women sit and listen and go away with a quiet but firm resolve to be better and live as God wants them to. There is no undue emotion, yet I know that great changes went on in the inner lives of some of his listeners as they drank in his words of truth and life. He is God's man through and through. There is absolute dependence on the power of the Spirit.

PAINTING UP A CONTINENT. Whoever heard of E. R. Drew? No one in my acquaintance, which embraces a cove of men who are supposed to have heard of everybody worth hearing about from kings down to dogcatchers. It is dollars to dillberries you never heard of him. He is the most modest, shrinking little man imaginable.

Yet give heed to what E. R. Drew has accomplished: He has smeared advertisements over sixty thousand miles of croo-country scenery, covered both banks of the Mississippi from New Orleans to Cairo, both banks of the Ohio from Cairo to Pittsburg, decorated as much of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado as he could reach with a bow's chair, and painted across the Canadian and Mexican borders, and the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards. He was the first man to paint a bicycle on the crazy stees of the Green Mountains. He flew the first cheving-gum banner from a balloon.—Parson Wood Currie, in Everybody's Magazine.

INVESTORS and LAND BUYERS

All over the Northwest are talking of Wallowa County and the wonderfully fertile lands here that can be bought cheaper than similar land anywhere in the Inland Empire. There is no fairer land in all the Inter-Mountain region—and no section with richer and more varied resources. Everything is here. Fertile land for grain, hay, sugar beets, vegetables, fruit; abundance of water, splendid climate, greatest body of timber in Eastern Oregon, unrivaled winter and summer range, great stock country and the mountains full of minerals. Wallowa County has

The Emperor's Orderly. Frenchmen of every rank and class dearly love titles. The manager of a Paris insurance company was decorated with the Legion of Honor a few days ago, and the clerks in the employ of the company presented him with a piece of plate to which their visiting cards were attached. On looking over them he was a good deal puzzled and amused by the visiting card of the office "boy," an old soldier from the Invalides, who was employed to open the office doors from 9 to 4. Under the man's name was the title "the emperor's orderly." He sent for the old soldier, who stumped in and saluted.

"Of what emperor are you the orderly, and how?" he asked. The old Invalides drew himself up to attention.

"I am the orderly of the emperor," he said, "Napoleon, le Petit Corporal."

"But he is dead. He has been dead some time," answered the puzzled manager.

"I dust his tomb for him," growled the old soldier.—London Express.

No Morals in Dreamland. If, as many writers have suggested, it is the soul itself that guides the imagery of dreams, how are we to explain the fact that in this chaos of ideas and feelings there is so little distinction between right and wrong that when dreaming we commit acts for which we should weep tears of blood were they as real as they seem to be.

As Professor Hoffman has said, "The familiar check of waking hours, 'I must not do it because it would be unjust or unkind,' never once seems to arrest us in the satisfaction of any whim which may blow about our wayward fancies."

From all of which we must conclude that the dream realm is a world that is entirely oblivious to any moral sense and that, though it may be true that a troubled conscience may produce or affect our dreams, the dreams themselves are never burdened with a conscience.—Bohemian Magazine.

A Maker of Sons. Some excellent bulls are credited to William Arolin, who was a London police judge in the thirties of the last century. He once remarked to counsel, "if you can show precisely at what moment the offense was committed and prove that the prisoner was not there when he did it, he could not possibly have done it." And he sagely added, "We cannot distrust ourselves of common sense in a court of justice."

Of a similar character was an axiom he once delivered himself of, which has been maliciously fathered on many other occupants of the bench, "If ever there was a case of clearer evidence than this case, this case is that case."

The sawmill at Lebanon is shortly to be moved just outside the city to a more advantageous site. Modern capitalists are on the lookout for good sites convenient for shipping products. If the city of Lebanon will make it known that any more are available and on what terms a manufactory can obtain one it will help the owners of that town amazingly.

The following from Granite, Ore. Gem is of interest: "Any way you take it advertising pays. A mud turtle lays just as many eggs in a season as does a hen, and lays them all in a bunch at that, which is bound to be more of a mental strain; but the turtle doesn't advertise and the hen does, and the result is there's a thousand calls for hen's eggs in the restaurants where there's one for turtle's."

Get your winter cabbage and sauer kraut. A. M. Wagner, Enterprise.

Ten million dollars worth of bonds for completing the irrigation projects of the northwest now under way, is what President Taft has promised to recommend to Congress. While in this part of the country the President showed plainly that he has an intimate knowledge of local needs. He made it clear that he is as good a conservationist as ever lived. His praises of Secretary Ballinger of the interior department were convincing, for the President said that the Seattle man is one of the most valuable agents of the federal government.

Advocates of equal suffrage in all parts of the country are watching the contest about to be waged in Washington for women for the ballot. A constitutional amendment granting suffrage to women will be submitted to the voters of the Evergreen State at the general election in 1910. To be ready for this expression, suffragists in all parts of the state are beginning to build their fences. The organization is to be extended down to the individual voting precincts, each one in charge of a chairman. The selections are now under way. Ample funds will be on hand to prosecute a thorough canvass and campaign. The differences which cropped out at the last state meeting have been smoothed over, so that now the suffragists are working as a harmonious whole, with great hopes for success.
